

CONTRIBUTOR NOTES

EDWIN BLOCK is professor of English at Marquette University in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and editor of Renascence: Essays on Values in Literature. He has published widely on Victorian literature and literary theory. His current research interest is the dramatic theory of Hans Urs von Balthasar.

JEFFREY E. BROWER is assistant professor of philosophy at Purdue University. He is coeditor of The Cambridge Companion to Abelard and author of various articles in medieval philosophy and the philosophy of religion.

PERRY J. CAHALL is assistant professor of theology at Ohio Dominican University in Columbus. He has published articles in the Josephinum Journal of Theology, Augustinian Studies, The Thomist, and Catholic Social Thought, Social Science, and Social Policy: An Encyclopedia.

JOHN F. DESMOND is Mary A. Denny Professor of English at Whitman College. He is the author of several books on Flannery O'Connor and Walker Percy and has published numerous essays on Southern and Irish writers. He is the founder and president of the Walker Percy Society.

PETER E. HODGSON is a fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and head of the Nuclear Physics Theoretical Group of the Nuclear and Particle Physics Laboratory. He has written numerous books on nuclear physics and many articles on theology and science, the philosophy of science, nuclear power, energy, and the environment.

JOHN JAY HUGHES is church historian and priest of the archdiocese of St. Louis. He has taught at the Catholic University of Louvain and at St. Louis University. He is author of ten books and several hundred articles.

MOLLY MORRISON is assistant professor of Italian at Ohio University in Athens where she teaches Italian language and literature. She has published various articles on Dante, Angela of Foligno, and Catherine of Siena.

MICHAEL C. REA is associate professor of philosophy and associate director of the Center for Philosophy of Religion at the University of Notre Dame. He is author of World without Design: The Ontological Consequences of Naturalism and various articles in metaphysics and the philosophy of religion.

MARTIN RHONHEIMER, a native of Switzerland and a priest of the Opus Dei Prelature, comes from a three-quarters Jewish family. He is professor of ethics and political philosophy at the Pontifical University of the Holy Cross in Rome. His article was translated from German by John Jay Hughes.

AMELIA J. UELMEN is director of the Institute on Religion, Law, and Lawyer's Work at Fordham University School of Law where she has also taught legal ethics and Catholic social thought and the law. Her scholarship focuses on how religious values and Catholic spirituality may be integrated into legal practice. She is a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Law and Religion.

THOMAS D. WILLIAMS, L.C., is dean of the theology school at the Regina Apostolorum Pontifical University in Rome and teaches courses on moral theology and Catholic social thought. His most recent book, Who Is My Neighbor? Personalism and the Foundations of Human Rights will be published this year.