

As a math major I have been extremely fortunate to have so many opportunities to study abroad. My freshman year I took a J-Term in Oaxaca, Mexico and the spring semester of my sophomore year I was actually able to study in Merida, Mexico for 5 months. That semester abroad was the best experience of my college years so far.

All the wonderful people I met and the amazing places I visited definitely changed my view of the world. I lived with a Mexican family and was able to directly enroll in the university down there allowing me to study alongside all the Mexican students and fully immerse myself. I took classes in archeology, anthropology, Spanish, history, and literature and the credits easily transferred to help me complete my degree.

I am so thankful I was able to have this study abroad experience and would highly recommend it to everyone. I got back from my trip so excited about it that I am already planning on taking the math J-Term in Peru!

Good luck with your endeavors and I encourage you to get out there and see the world!
