Twin Cities Women's and Gender Studies Collaborative

The Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies program at the University of St. Thomas is part of a collaborative with three other area schools (Augsburg College, Hamline University, and the University of St. Catherine), and appropriate courses may be taken at any of these institutions without an exchange course limitation. Students are urged to speak with the program director to avoid duplication of courses.

Advising

The Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies program encourages students to consult the program director and other faculty about opportunities outside the classroom, including study abroad, research with faculty, and internship options.

We also advise our students about course options and anticipated course offerings, as well as graduate program and employment opportunities.
