CONTRIBUTOR NOTES

Peter E. Hodgson is Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and Head of the Nuclear Physics Theoretical Group of the Nuclear and Particle Physics Laboratory. He has written numerous books on nuclear physics and many articles on theology and science, the philosophy of science, and nuclear power, energy, and the environment.

Kenneth J. Howell is Director of the John Henry Cardinal Newman Institute of Catholic Thought and Adjunct Associate Professor of Religious Studies at the University of Illinois, where he teaches classes on the history, theology, and philosophy of Catholicism. He is the author of several books and articles on the historical relations of theology and science.

Paul Robichaud is Postdoctoral Fellow and Lecturer in English at Yale University. His essays on the work of David Jones have appeared in numerous publications. His current research examines the relationship among nationalism, history, and modernism in twentieth-century Britain and Ireland.

Guido Dierickx is Professor of Sociology and Political Science at the University of Antwerp, Belgium. He has participated in many research projects and published extensively on political sociology and the sociology of religion.

Emmanuel Katongole is Associate Research Professor of Theology and World Christianity at Duke University and Senior Lecturer in the Institute of Ethics and Development Studies at Uganda Martyrs.
University, Nkozi, Uganda. He has published a number of books and articles on African theology, among other topics. His current research interests include history, and violence and memory in African theology. He is a Catholic priest in the Kampala Archdiocese, Uganda.

RAYMOND T. GAWRONSKI, S.J. is Associate Professor of Theology at Marquette University. He specializes in Christian dogmatic and mystical theology and world religions. He is the author of two books, numerous articles and essays, and a television video series. He is also an aggregate member of Mount Tabor Byzantine Catholic Monastery in Redwood Valley, California.