Bradley J. Birzer (b. 1967) is the Russell Amos Kirk Chair in American Studies and Professor of History, Hillsdale College. Co-founder and editor at large of the Imaginative Conservative, Birzer is the author of several biographies.

Christopher M. Graney is adjunct scholar with the Vatican Observatory in Rome, Italy, and Tucson, Arizona, and professor of physics and astronomy at Jefferson Community & Technical College in Louisville, Kentucky. He is the author of two books on the history of astronomy, both published by the University of Notre Dame Press: Setting Aside All Authority: Giovanni Battista Riccioli and the Science Against Copernicus in the Age of Galileo (2015) and Mathematical Disquisitions—The Booklet of Theses Immortalized by Galileo (2017). He also writes for the Vatican astronomical observatory’s “Sacred Space Astronomy/The Catholic Astronomer” blog. His article in this issue of Logos has its origins in a series of posts he wrote for that blog.

James L. Heft (Marianist), a priest in the Society of Mary, spent many years at the University of Dayton, serving as chair of the theology department for six years, provost of the university for eight years, and then chancellor for ten years. He left the University of Dayton in 2006 to found the Institute for Advanced Catholic Studies at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles (ifacs.com), where he now serves as the Alton Brooks Professor of Religion and president of the institute. He has written and edited thirteen books and published more than 175 articles and book chapters. Most recently he edited Learned Ignorance: Intellectual Humility Among

Rev. Walter F. Kedjierski, PhD, a priest of the diocese of Rockville Centre, New York, currently serves as executive director of the Secretariat of Ecumenical and Inter-Religious Affairs of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops. His last assignment was as rector/president of the Seminary of the Immaculate Conception in Huntington, New York, where he first served as vice rector and director of diaconate formation, as well as director of the Sacred Heart Institute for the Continuing Formation of Clergy. Simultaneously, Father Kedjierski was the director of his diocese’s Office of Ecumenical and Inter-Religious Affairs, which involved him in a number of ecumenical and inter-religious dialogues. He has taught theology at St. John’s University in New York and St. Joseph’s Seminary in Yonkers. Father Kedjierski has published numerous articles on theology and dialogue with a range of journals including The Princeton Theological Review and Ecumenical Trends. He looks with the greatest of fondness upon his past experiences as a parish priest and pastor.

Russell Kirk (1918–1994) was the founder of post-World War II American conservatism. His dissertation, published as The Conservative Mind in 1953, changed the political landscape, ushering in not only Barry Goldwater but also Ronald Reagan. In addition to many books, he also published a number of award-winning short stories and three novels of the fantastic.

Thomas Pfau (PhD 1989, SUNY Buffalo) is the Alice Mary Baldwin Professor of English, with secondary appointments in Germanic

Scott J. Roniger is assistant professor of philosophy at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles, California. He earned his doctorate in philosophy, with distinction, from The Catholic University of America and holds graduate degrees in philosophy from the University of Chicago and the Pontifical University of the Holy Cross in Rome. He has published scholarly articles on Plato, Aristotle, St. Augustine, St. Thomas Aquinas, and Husserlian phenomenology.