

Submission Guidelines

All manuscripts must be in the English language. Submissions should be made in duplicate and prepared according to prevailing academic standards. The contributor's name should appear only on a separate header sheet. Please number the manuscript pages consecutively in the upper-right-hand corner.

Articles normally range from 3,000 to 9,000 words and should conform to the Chicago Manual of Style, 15th edition. The editors prefer the documentary-note or humanities style over the author-date system or social-science style. Double-spacing, including endnotes, is mandatory. If not already submitted electronically, upon acceptance of a manuscript, the author will be asked to submit it via an email attachment.

The editors prefer electronic submissions.
Please email to: logos@stthomas.edu.

If sending by mail, please send two copies of the manuscript to the editors at:

Multiple submission

The editors assume your essay is not being simultaneously considered for publication in other journals.

Required information

All submissions should be preceded by a header containing the title of the material, the name(s) of the author(s), any affiliations, mail and email addresses, and telephone numbers.

Decision cycle

Submissions are promptly recorded, forwarded to the editors and an acknowledgment is sent to the author(s). Decisions regarding an article take about three to four months.

Angel on Ponte Sant'Angelo, Rome, Italy

“This is a clearly superior journal . . . readers and researchers will want to continue consulting and pondering these articles well into the future. Most research libraries will immediately recognize the durability of this journal's value.”

FROM THE COUNCIL OF EDITORS
OF LEARNED JOURNALS (CELJ)

“As Aristotle points out, the luminosity of beauty follows upon the intelligibility of truth. The combination is irresistible. Logos brings these transcendental qualities to the doorsteps of its subscribers. Religious persons of all stripes will find something in the pages of Logos to enlighten, inform and nourish the human spirit.”
